SUMMARY OF THE PROJECT

People all over the world have very different lives and ways of life. People have different belief systems (sometimes called religions, sometimes traditional, sometimes political beliefs) and often live their lives according to what they believe is right or wrong. Culture is learned behaviours, traditions, beliefs and a way of life created by a group of people. Our world is constantly changing, and is filled with a variety of people who have developed many diverse cultures. People often follow the norms of their countries; make statements about other nationalities; create stereotypes and prejudices.

It is important to learn to live with and respect each other's cultures and backgrounds. Prejudices are not genetically installed; they are rather a learned behaviour. History has shown what people are capable of when prejudices are not broken and intolerance prevails in societies. Along with injustice and violence, discrimination and marginalisation are common forms of intolerance.

The Youth Exchange aims to counteract the influences that lead to fear and exclusion of others and to help young people develop independent judgement, critical thinking and ethical reasoning skills. The participating countries, with their diverse ethnic and religious populations, with their different cultures and traditions, are a good example for reducing prejudice and promoting tolerance by strengthening civil society. The partner organisations united for the Youth Exchange represent different parts of the world. They represent countries with different backgrounds, histories and traditions. It became clear once again that the aim of promoting tolerance, mutual understanding, principles and values is not only that other people know them, but that they understand them and can actually live with them.

Participants will value differences and will not see them as a threat, but as something positive to learn from. And they will also realise that the differences are often in the expression - not in the inspiration or reason - of things. They will see one aspect of their identity that makes them different from another, but there will be other aspects that bring them closer.

They may be from different cultures, with different backgrounds and experiences, but this is an advantage, not a disadvantage: diversity is their strength.

On the other hand, the promotion of tolerance implies the development of partnerships and networks, as well as cooperation towards common goals and values. In order to actively counteract these developments, the projects will be a platform for the participant to make new friends and create a network.

Our aim is to promote inclusion, tolerance, equality, respect and mutual understanding through artistic expression among young people from different countries.

Our objectives are:

1. Intercultural learning and dialogue between the participants from different countries, in order to promote mutual understanding and tolerance;
- 2- Promote inclusion and equality among young people through non-formal learning;
- 3- Increasing young people's knowledge of different cultures/histories/religions;
- 4- Developing creativity and participation of young people in the project;
- 4- Developing young people's creativity and participation in civil life by promoting "Erasmus+" opportunities among them;
- 5- Bringing together young people from different backgrounds, nations and cultures;
- 6- Learning to respect every opinion and breaking stereotypes by carrying out evaluations and debates with young people from other countries;

We received the evaluation from the evaluator, who pointed out the different points we had to improve in order to increase the quality of the project and after talking with the partners, the ACD working group and after making these changes we have decided to resubmit it.
